

Spring Hill Library

Spring Hill, Tennessee

The City of Spring Hill wanted to expand and improve their library to meet the needs of their growing community. Involving both major renovation and new construction, the new library is more than twice the size of the old – and includes a children’s reading space, a computer area, and plenty of room for future growth. They were even able to keep parts of the library open during most of the construction process.

Spring Hill’s City Engineer Jerome Dempsey on Carden’s organization: “We’d have a weekly progress meeting – and they’re proactive. They keep the paperwork flowing – and they keep the job flowing.”
